ABSTRACT

This report presents data from a study of arts education in the Chicago Public Schools (CPS). Information came from surveys of principals in all six CPS regions; data on arts offerings in high schools available from the University of Chicago Consortium on Chicago School Research; and surveys of outside arts providers. There was substantial disparity among elementary schools in the provision of arts education and students' exposure to various arts disciplines. One-third of elementary schools had no arts performance groups available to students. Depending on the school, high school students could have 4 or 102 arts classes available. A large array of arts providers brought arts education in all four disciplines to CHP students during the school day. Over 60 percent of elementary and high schools engaged outside arts providers to bring programs to their students. Little coordination existed to link schools with appropriate outside art providers. More than 250 foundations, corporations, academic institutions, and government agencies were funding the in-school arts programs of outside providers. Elementary and secondary school principals reported different needs for arts education within their institutions. Elementary principals sought programs and staff, while secondary principals wanted equipment and space. The executive summary of the full report is attached. (SM)

As metropolitan

community foundation, The Chicago Community Trust helps hundreds of area residents manage their charitable giving. Founded in 1915, the Trust is a union of numerous gifts, bequests, and other contributions that form charitable funds. These funds allow the Trust to make nearly $40 million in grants to organizations serving greater Chicago.

In addition to grant making and work with the many donors we serve, the Trust regularly disseminates information and convenes numerous forums that address the region's most pressing needs and promising opportunities. This survey of arts in schools is one such example of collecting and sharing information with public policy makers, civic leaders, educators, and interested area residents.

Acknowledgements

The Chicago Community Trust is deeply grateful to the hundreds of educators and artists who took the time to complete our surveys. In addition, we thank Arne Duncan and his staff, in particular Armando Almendarez and Sean Egan, for their support and assistance. Many Chicago Public Schools personnel at the school, region, and Board level went out of their way to facilitate our tasks. We appreciate the time, effort and commitment each of them contributed toward bringing this project to fruition.

Recognizing the importance of the arts for full child development, as a means of improving academic achievement, and as a means of better socialization, The Chicago Community Trust and other Chicago-area foundations have supported and organized arts education programs for the Chicago Public Schools. Over the past decade, these programs have crossed the arts disciplines and become increasingly long-term and linked with basic curricula. And the climate for arts education has changed. What was once a barren landscape in the public school system is now a field covered with arts programs, some of them flourishing.

When the Trust launched its Education Initiative, a five-year, $50 million effort in the summer of 2001, it seemed an appropriate time to determine the extent of arts education in the Chicago Public Schools so that the foundations' support of arts education would be more focused and more effective. Two Trust staff members, Lynn Donaldson and Erika Pearsall, took on the daunting project of surveying all the Chicago Public Schools. They sought to document the extent of arts education provided kindergarten through 12th graders during the school day, in the school year 2000-2001. This survey is the first of its kind for Chicago.

Data were collected about both school-provided arts education and arts education brought to the schools from outside arts organizations. The report is based on surveys from 85 percent of

CPS principals, and 144 arts organizations who work in the schools during the school day. A full description of the methodology can be found inside the back cover.

There are many good stories about arts education in various schools, some of them provided by school resources and some of them from organizations contracted to deliver programs. One might best characterize the situation as uneven: some students have substantial arts education and some have none. This is information about today. It will, hopefully, lead to some focused work with the Chicago Public Schools and with the arts community to continue to make progress in bringing the arts to Chicago's children.

“I think music and the arts should be considered core subjects in our nation’s schools. There is absolutely no conflict between the expansion of our fine arts programs, our music programs and focus on other academic programs.”

Secretary of Education Rod Paige
August 22, 2001

On Tuesday, January 8, 2002, President Bush signed a new education reform bill entitled, “No Child Left Behind.” This bill designates the arts as a core discipline along with, math, science, language arts and social studies.

Elementary Schools (Kindergarten - 8th Grade)

Chicago Public Schools – Arts Education Survey

The following section is based on survey data from 414 of 490 Chicago public elementary schools.

It contains information on the arts education provided by CPS arts teachers. It does not include any arts education provided by individual classroom teachers, nor does it include electives, such as band or chorus.

In 2000-2001,
Kindergarten – 8th graders received
an average of 58 minutes per week of arts education from school arts specialists in visual arts, music, theater and/or dance.
(MPW)

The median for CPS elementary schools was 45 MPW.

The State mandates a four hour instructional day (1200 minutes a week) for Kindergarten and first graders, and a five hour instructional day (1500 minutes per week) for second through twelfth graders.

* MPW will be used throughout this report to designate minutes per week of school provided arts education.

High Schools

Chicago Public Schools – Arts Education Survey

The following data is provided by the University of Chicago's Consortium on Chicago School Research. It is data from 1999 and does not include charter schools.

The Consortium is an independent federation of Chicago area organizations that participate in research activities to assist the implementation of school reform. The Consortium is not only a public research organization but also a source of public information and discussion about school improvement.

The data for performance groups is based on the 67 out of 79 Chicago public high schools which responded to the Trust's survey.

Current high school graduation requirements include two credits or two full years of fine arts.

Arts classes ranged from 1-17% of individual school's offerings. Number of arts courses ranged from 4 – 102. While larger schools usually offered more, the choices at similar-sized schools sometimes varied greatly (for example, in two schools of about 650 students, one had 11 arts courses, the other 28).

At 10% of the high schools, fewer than a third of the students were taking at least one art course.

Outside Arts Providers

Chicago Public Schools – Art Education Survey

We surveyed primarily not-for-profit arts organizations (such as The Art Institute) and arts education organizations (such as Urban Gateways). We also found a few for-profit arts education organizations (such as Music Education Services, Inc.).

Our survey found 144 arts organizations which served Chicago public elementary and high schools during the school day in 2000-2001. Throughout this report we refer to these organizations as Outside Arts Providers.

Outside Arts Providers offer three kinds of programs which serve students: assemblies, which are programs brought to the schools and presented to a large group of children at once; field trips, where an arts organization hosts a group of students for a tour, performance, or other activities, and classroom programs, where one or more visiting artists work with a particular classroom of children and their teacher. Outside Arts Providers also give professional development opportunities to teachers.

Individual schools and arts organizations make their own arrangements for these programs. Funding comes from school discretionary funds or funding procured by the arts organization. These organizations listed over 250 different sources of support for their arts education programs, a mixture of foundations, corporations, academic institutions and government agencies. In a few cases, parents paid fees for programs.

Outside Arts Providers: Classroom Programs in the Responding Schools

Chicago Public Schools – Arts Education Survey

For classroom programs, artists from the Outside Arts Providers usually work with the classroom teachers to integrate their programs into the classroom curriculum, and usually work with the same group of students over an extended period of time. Some programs last the entire school year.

The following section presents the classroom programs which Outside Arts Providers brought to the 414 schools in our data base, showing the numbers of students served, their grades, and for how much time. This is followed by charts which lay out the school-provided and arts organization-provided hours side by side for several schools.

254 of our 414 elementary schools had at least one Outside Arts Provider bringing classroom programs to their students.

160 had none.

The number per school ranged from 1-8.

The average was 2.

41 of our 67 high schools had at least one Outside Arts Provider bringing classroom programs to their students

26 had none.

The number per school ranged from 1-9.

The average was 2.

LONG TERM PROGRAMS

Of the 102,000 students in classroom programs, over 12,000 (12%) received a program providing 28 hours or more of instruction during the year. This is more time than half of CPS elementary students received from their school arts specialists.

A third of those 102,000 students received programs providing 14 hours or more of instruction during the year, more than a period a week for half the year. These were primarily with musicians and theater artists.

Chicago Public Schools – Arts Education Survey

Board of Education Funding

Chicago Public Schools – Arts Education Survey

The formula:

The Chicago Teachers' Contract which took effect September 1, 1989 contains the formula for assigning art and music teachers to elementary schools. The formula, which has been renewed to the present time, assigns a .5 art or music teacher to schools with an enrollment of 750 or less, and a 1.0 position to all other schools.

The formula does not provide an art class a week for most students:

.5 ARTS SPECIALIST FOR SCHOOLS UP TO 750 STUDENTS

A half time specialist is able to see about 420 students for a class period a week; that is 14 class periods, each with 30 children. So Board funding of .5 provides a class period a week only in schools of 420 or fewer students.

- 261 schools had enrollments up to 750, eligible for .5 arts specialist from the Board
- 72 had 420 or fewer students: Board funding adequate for an arts class a week.
- 189 had larger enrollments: Board funding inadequate for an arts class a week.

1.0 ARTS SPECIALIST FOR SCHOOLS LARGER THAN 750 STUDENTS

A full time specialist is able to see about 840 students a class period a week. So Board funding of 1.0 provides a class period a week only in schools of 840 or fewer students.

- 144 schools had enrollments greater than 750
- 30 had 840 or fewer students: Board funding adequate for an arts class a week.
- 114 had 841 to 2278 students: Board funding inadequate for an arts class a week.

Discretionary money nearly doubles Board funded arts staff:

Most schools supplement the Board provided positions with their discretionary funds, often with money they receive from the State. The fact that all but 64 schools reported providing 40 minutes or week or more reveals the extent of this supplemental funding.

The formula supported about 314 full time equivalents for our responding schools. Those schools reported a full time equivalent of 600 arts specialist working in their schools:

283 music, 278 art, 21 theater, 14 dance, and 4 fine arts specialists.

SOME HIGHLIGHTS IN ARTS EDUCATION NATIONALLY AND AT CPS

The beginnings of the many arts organizations and partnerships serving the schools are not included.

- 1971 The Communications Arts Center, attached to Walter Disney Magnet, opens its pilot program where students from all over the city can come for three week blocks to “develop the senses and broaden the mind.”
- 1979 CPS in financial crisis; 400 elementary art and music teachers “furloughed” in one week.
- 1988 State Legislature passes Chicago School Reform Act.
- 1989 Mayor Richard M. Daley elected.
- 1989 Teachers’ Union contract includes .5 art or music teacher for schools up 750 students, and 1.0 for larger schools.
- 1991 Gallery 37 opens.
- 1991 National Assessment Governing Board approves the inclusion of the arts in the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP).
- 1994 National Standards for Arts Education published; funded by U.S. Dept. of Education, National Endowment for the Arts (NEA), and National Endowment for the Humanities.
- 1995 Goals 2000 Arts Education Partnership, created by U.S. Dept. of Education and NEA, holds its first meeting involving 100 national organizations.
- 1995 State Legislature passes a law making the Mayor of Chicago responsible for naming the CEO and the Board of Education of the Chicago Public Schools.
- 1995 Mayor Daley names Paul Vallas CEO of CPS, and Gary Chico Board President.
- 1996 Chicago Board of Education adopts a Resolution supporting the “arts in Chicago Public Schools as critical components in the academic, social and cultural education of our children,” and states “that the students of the CPS are entitled to receive the comprehensive and sequential instruction in the arts that meets national, state, and city standards.”
- 1996 CPS establishes Bureau of Cultural Arts as part of its Central Administration
- 1996 CEO Vallas establishes an Arts Education Task Force chaired by First Lady, Maggie Daley and Commissioner of Cultural Affairs, Lois Weisberg.
- 1997 Arts Education Task Force issues its report, The Arts in Schools, recommending increased commitment to arts education to be phased in over 3 years.
- 1997 NAEP publishes Arts Education Assessment Framework, which includes dance, music, theater, and visual arts.
- 1997 Illinois State Board of Education (ISBE) adopts Illinois Learning Standards for elementary and secondary students in most subjects, including Fine Arts.
- 2000 Chicago Board of Education approves CPS Fine Arts Standards in Dance, Drama., Music, and Visual Arts.
- 2000 CPS creates the Fine and Performing Arts Magnet Cluster Program, FPAMCP, giving 48 schools central office administrative support to develop more arts education, partnerships, and professional development.
- 2001 Mayor Daley names ArneDuncan CEO of CPS, and Michael Scott Board President.
- 2002 Federal education reform legislation, “No Child Left Behind,” designates the arts as a core discipline.

Methodology

We used three principal methods of gathering information and data for this report. We provided our school survey to the principals of the 569 grade and high schools in Chicago. The public schools are divided into six regions, and the principals of schools in each region hold regular meetings. In the spring of 2001, Armando Almendarez, at that time CPS' Chief Officer of the Office of Language, Cultural and Early Childhood Education, arranged for us to attend these regional meetings and to distribute our survey to the assembled school leaders. To encourage principals to fill out their survey, and to express appreciation for their time, we drew two schools from the completed surveys at each regional meeting, and awarded each a grant of $500 for their arts programs. We followed up with principals who were absent or who took the survey back to their school to complete, with phone calls, faxes, emails, and postal mail to secure their responses.

Our response rate was high. Of 490 elementary schools systemwide, we received 414 completed surveys for a response rate of 85 percent. Of 79 high schools in the system, 67 replied, for a response rate of 85 percent. We gathered responses from all six CPS regions and from schools of varying sizes and characteristics, and feel our sample is representative of the public schools overall.

The University of Chicago Consortium on Chicago School Research provided us with our second major source of information, data set on arts offerings in high schools.

Our third source of information was a survey of outside arts providers that we conducted in spring 2001 as well. We contacted organizations that were known to The Chicago Community Trust, and supplemented this list by asking school principals on their survey for outside providers working with their schools. When contacting the providers we clarified whether they specifically provided programs to Chicago Public Schools during the school day in the school year 2000–2001. Since our data were individual-school based, we excluded programs that involved multiple schools, such as Gallery 37 or Latino Art Beat. We disseminated our surveys by a combination of fax, email and postal mail, and followed up to ensure responses.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

A survey by

THE Chicago
Community TRUST

As metropolitan

community foundation, The Chicago Community Trust helps hundreds of area residents manage their charitable giving. Founded in 1915, the Trust is a union of numerous gifts, bequests, and other contributions that form charitable funds. These funds allow the Trust to make nearly $40 million in grants to organizations serving greater Chicago.

In addition to grant making and work with the many donors we serve, the Trust regularly disseminates information and convenes numerous forums that address the region's most pressing needs and promising opportunities. This survey of arts in schools is one such example of collecting and sharing information with public policy makers, civic leaders, educators, and interested area residents.

Acknowledgements

The Chicago Community Trust is deeply grateful to the hundreds of educators and artists who took the time to complete our surveys. In addition, we thank Arne Duncan and his staff, in particular Armando Almendarez and Sean Egan, for their support and assistance. Many Chicago Public Schools personnel at the school, region, and Board level went out of their way to facilitate our tasks. We appreciate the time, effort and commitment each of them contributed toward bringing this project to fruition.

Recognizing the importance of the arts for full child development, as a means of improving academic achievement, and as a means of better socialization, The Chicago Community Trust and other Chicago-area foundations have supported and organized arts education programs for the Chicago Public Schools. Over the past decade, these programs have crossed the arts disciplines and become increasingly long-term and linked with basic curricula. And the climate for arts education has changed. What was once a barren landscape in the public school system is now a field covered with arts programs, some of them flourishing.

When the Trust launched its Education Initiative, a five-year, $50 million effort in the summer of 2001, it seemed an appropriate time to determine the extent of arts education in the Chicago Public Schools so that the foundations' support of arts education would be more focused and more effective. Two Trust staff members, Lynn Donaldson and Erika Pearsall, took on the daunting project of surveying all the Chicago Public Schools. They sought to document the extent of arts education provided kindergarten through 12th graders during the school day, in the school year 2000-2001. This survey is the first of its kind for Chicago.

Data were collected about both school-provided arts education and arts education brought to the schools from outside arts organizations. The report is based on surveys from 85 percent of

CPS principals, and 144 arts organizations who work in the schools during the school day. A full description of the methodology can be found inside the back cover.

There are many good stories about arts education in various schools, some of them provided by school resources and some of them from organizations contracted to deliver programs. One might best characterize the situation as uneven: some students have substantial arts education and some have none. This is information about today. It will, hopefully, lead to some focused work with the Chicago Public Schools and with the arts community to continue to make progress in bringing the arts to Chicago's children.

FINDINGS ON

Arts Education

PROVIDED BY CPS SPECIALISTS

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLSDisparity in Access to Arts Education

There is substantial disparity among elementary schools in the provision of arts education.

The minutes per week of art offered by CPS arts specialists in surveyed schools ranges from 0 to 225.

Fifteen of the 414 elementary schools surveyed reported offering no arts education at all. These schools have a combined population of nearly 7,300 elementary school children who are receiving no exposure to art instruction in the school.

Some Schools Lack Art Instructors

Eighty six percent of the elementary schools surveyed provided at least 40 minutes of instructional time per week in the arts. This corresponds to a class period. Most schools must use discretionary money to supplement Chicago Board of Education funds to make that possible. However, 14% of elementary schools did not offer at least a class a week for students.

CPS appears to have unclear expectations about how much arts education an elementary student should receive. In practice, the schools seem to view one period per week as the minimum. However, Board of Education funding is not adequate to provide an arts class a week for all students. Their formula funds a half time arts specialist for schools with an enrollment up to 750, (a half time person can work with 420 students once a week), and one full time specialist for larger schools (30 schools have between 1250 and 2278 students). Most schools use their discretionary funds to hire staff to make at least one arts class per week possible for their students.

However, in 4% of the schools surveyed, students received no arts education, and in another 10% of the schools surveyed, students received more than zero but less than one period per week because the school did not have enough personnel.

"All students have the right to equitable access to art in their lives and in their schools. The arts teach learners to know themselves as capable citizens in a democratic society, observing, creating, reflecting, making choices, and taking responsibility for actions in the world."

Renaissance in the Classroom: Arts Integration and Meaningful Learning
Gail Burnaford, Arnold Aprill, Cynthia Weiss, editors

Limited Scope of Disciplines

There is substantial disparity in students' exposure to various arts disciplines. Some elementary students may receive instruction in four disciplines — dance, music, theater and visual arts — while other students are introduced to none.

At half of the surveyed elementary schools, students were offered only one of the major arts disciplines. Students had access to two disciplines in 41 percent of the schools.

Schools that offer the major disciplines are strongly inclined towards visual arts (e.g., drawing, painting, sculpture) and music. Only seven percent of the elementary schools offered theater and only four percent offered dance.

"Fine Art instruction is vital to a positive school climate.

If government agencies are looking to fund 'safe school projects,' they need to begin to see the value of arts in providing children with positive learning activities. In addition, the arts promote academic growth in language, math and critical thinking skills."

HIGH SCHOOLS

Limited Course Selection

Depending on what school he or she attends, a Chicago public high school student could have 4 or 102 arts classes available. Larger schools usually offer more courses, but size is not the whole story. Arts classes comprised between one and 17 percent of courses at a given school. One school of 650 students offered 11 arts classes while another school of the same size offered 28 classes.

"Art is humanity's most essential, most universal language. Art is not a frill, but a necessary part of communication."

PERFORMANCE GROUPS

Limited Elective Opportunities

One third of elementary schools had no arts performance groups available to their students.

Some 35 percent of the elementary schools surveyed had no chorus, band, orchestra, dance or drama groups. Nearly half (45 percent) of schools did offer chorus, and 16 percent offered dance. Only 20 percent of surveyed schools offered more than one of these electives.¹

Effectively, performance opportunities are not available until high school for many students. Thus these young people wait until their teenage years to participate in these activities and develop the skills they promote.

Except for a few very small schools which have none, most Chicago high schools have two or three performance opportunities.

¹ Note that elective activities are not included in our previous estimates of minutes per week spent on arts education. Elective activities are available outside of the regular required curriculum, and sometimes meet after-school.

FINDINGS ON

Arts Providers

A Large Number of Arts Providers Serve the Public Schools

A large array of arts providers brings arts education in all four disciplines to Chicago Public School students during the school day. We located 144 of these agencies who worked with the public schools in 2000-2001. The number of elementary and high school students served by these groups in that year is notable:

- 315,000 students were hosted by museums and other educational venues
- 274,000 students were provided with assemblies on arts themes in their own schools
- 102,400 students worked with experienced artists in their own classroom
- 7,500 teachers took part in professional development that assisted them to integrate arts into their classes

Many Classrooms Experience In-Depth Instruction from Artists

Some 61 percent of both elementary and high schools engaged outside arts providers to bring programs into their students' classrooms. For classroom programs, experienced artists often work with the same group of students over an extended period of time, sometimes for the entire school year. The artist and classroom teacher usually work together to integrate the arts into the wider curriculum.

A third of the students participating in these classroom programs — 33,000 of 102,000 — had extended contact totaling 15 hours or more with the teaching artist.

Significantly more students received classroom programs in visual arts than in the other disciplines — 43,000 of 102,000. But of the 33,000 students receiving 15 hours or more, more received music — 11,000 of 33,000 — and theater — 9,300 of 33,000.

"Think of life without (the arts), how empty it would be, as though you lost a limb.

Art lifts us off of the pavement. It raises our spirits."

Some Schools Missing Opportunities to Create Classroom Programs

Some elementary schools in serious need of arts education are not using outside arts providers to create classroom programs and fill gaps in instruction.

Many of the schools offering few minutes per week of arts education may lack staff or existing programs to serve their students. Some of these schools furthermore did not enrich their art offerings by hiring outside arts providers. Of the fifteen grade schools offering no arts education on their own, seven did not hire the services of outside artists for classroom programs either.

Some elementary schools offering no arts education on their own did give many of their students at least some contact with the arts by using outside providers. Of the fifteen elementary schools with no in-house arts education, five reached at least 30% of their students with some kind of in-class arts experience.

Need to Connect Schools with Artists

Little coordination exists to link schools with appropriate outside arts providers.

Most schools are left on their own to find an outside arts provider. While the Chicago Public Schools has published a cultural resources guide, Schools Without Walls, covering more than 100 organizations, including many arts providers, there appears to be little centralized authority in CPS to efficiently link schools with the most appropriate arts provider. When schools were asked to describe how they find arts providers, they most frequently cited a random personal encounter or geographic proximity as the determining factors.

Two Efforts Successfully Link Schools with Artists

The Chicago Arts Partnership in Education (CAPE) and the CPS Fine and Performing Arts Magnet Cluster Program (FPAMCP) are two successful efforts connecting schools with artists and providing professional development in arts education. CAPE currently works with 30 schools, and CPS' FPAMCP with 48 schools.

Role of Philanthropy

More than 250 foundations, corporations, academic institutions and government agencies are funding the in-school arts programs of outside providers.

Most outside arts providers are not-for-profit agencies that receive philanthropic grants for their operations. We found that a broad base of support exists for arts education. The 144 arts organizations serving the public schools listed over 250 sources of support for their arts education programs.

While many organizations are funding arts education, little is known about their grantmaking in terms of the average size of grants, the types of art disciplines funded, etc. Coordination and networking of the outside providers could lead to more effective and strategic giving by foundations and other entities that give support to the arts in schools.

FINDINGS ON

Arts Curriculum Needs

Elementary and Secondary School principals reported different needs for arts education in their institutions. Elementary principals seek the basics: programs and staff. High school principals rank these needs lower, and call for equipment and space.

Elementary schools in Chicago do not require arts education as a prerequisite for graduation. Thus it can be expected that “arts infrastructure” is less developed at the grade school level and, indeed, the chief concerns of our interviewed principals were concerned with basic shortages of staff and programs.

High school students in Chicago must complete four semesters of arts education to graduate, and so most high schools have staff and programs for arts instruction. The high school principals, however, seem to indicate a desire to more effectively implement their arts curricula by calling for more equipment and space as their main needs.

HOW DO PRINCIPALS RANK PROGRAM NEEDS?

Elementary Schools		High Schools
Programs	34%	Equipment	27%
Teachers	22%	Space	23%
Equipment	16%	Programs	18%
Funds	8%	Other	12%
Other	7%	Funds	7%
Space	5%	Teachers	6%
Professional Development	5%	Field Trips / Assemblies	3%

Methodology

We used three principal methods of gathering information and data for this report. We provided our school survey to the principals of the 569 grade and high schools in Chicago. The public schools are divided into six regions, and the principals of schools in each region hold regular meetings. In the spring of 2001, Armando Almendarez, at that time CPS' Chief Officer of the Office of Language, Cultural and Early Childhood Education, arranged for us to attend these regional meetings and to distribute our survey to the assembled school leaders. To encourage principals to fill out their survey, and to express appreciation for their time, we drew two schools from the completed surveys at each regional meeting, and awarded each a grant of $500 for their arts programs. We followed up with principals who were absent or who took the survey back to their school to complete, with phone calls, faxes, emails, and postal mail to secure their responses.

Our response rate was high. Of 490 elementary schools systemwide, we received 414 completed surveys for a response rate of 85 percent. Of 79 high schools in the system, 67 replied, for a response rate of 85 percent. We gathered responses from all six CPS regions and from schools of varying sizes and characteristics, and feel our sample is representative of the public schools overall.

The University of Chicago Consortium on Chicago School Research provided us with our second major source of information, data set on arts offerings in high schools.

Our third source of information was a survey of outside arts providers that we conducted in spring 2001 as well. We contacted organizations that were known to The Chicago Community Trust, and supplemented this list by asking school principals on their survey for outside providers working with their schools. When contacting the providers we clarified whether they specifically provided programs to Chicago Public Schools during the school day in the school year 2000–2001. Since our data were individual-school based, we excluded programs that involved multiple schools, such as Gallery 37 or Latino Art Beat. We disseminated our surveys by a combination of fax, email and postal mail, and followed up to ensure responses.
